Background info for the teacher/trainer of the online course:

Domestic violence, and the workplace.

The aim of the course

This course is meant to make it clear to the participants why domestic violence is an issue that is both relevant and important for a company/workplace to work actively with.

In this course the participants will gain knowledge about what domestic violence is, what it isn't, and which consequences people subjected to domestic violence experience – especially related to their work life.

The participants will also learn how to have the difficult conversation with someone they know, or suspect, is subjected to domestic violence – what to do, what to say and what not to say. And then they will also get tips on how a company can begin dealing with and prevent domestic violence in the workplace through guidelines and other tangible initiatives.

About the PowerPoint:

The entire course is contained in the PowerPoint which consists of 11 slides.

Everything that is thought relevant for the teacher to say about each slide is written out in the note below each slide. The text in the notes that are in squared parenthesis [] is meant as a note to the teacher.

Exercise

On slide 9 there is an exercise for the participants. The intention with this exercise is to make the participants reflect on what they would do if they suspected that their co-workers may be subjected to domestic violence. The important thing with this exercise is not necessarily to come up with the answer – because what to do will always depend on the context. The intention is to facilitate a conversation where the participants can reflect on and talk to each other about what to do and why they think something is or isn't the right thing to do.
